Theme of this academic year in a word? Evolution.

The theme of this past academic year has been, in a word, evolution. Some of the changes were unexpected and challenging, while others were highly anticipated and extremely exciting. In August 2019, our faculty, staff and students officially moved back into the Social Science building, home to the newly renovated Phyllis & Harvey Sandler School of Social Work, featuring new classrooms outfitted with interactive technology to promote student learning and collaboration, a new modern and welcoming student lounge with shared study and social spaces, and a new multi-use auditorium for guest lectures, professional development workshops and special events. We are ever grateful to the Sandler Family for their ongoing generosity.

In mid-December 2019, we received University approval of our joint proposal with the School of Criminology & Criminal Justice to form a new college – The College of Social Work & Criminal Justice – which was officially born on July 1, 2020. We also welcomed to our school the Robin Rubin Center for Happiness and Life Enhancement, which offers free wellness programming for FAU students, faculty, staff and the community. Additionally, our Office of Professional Development has continued to expand its course and workshop offerings and has already begun offering timely webinars, which you can read more about inside.

Certainly the most unexpected change this year was the arrival of COVID-19, which has forced all of us – our school, university, state, country and world – to pause, orient ourselves to a new normal and navigate our way forward through mounting unknowns and uncertainties. We were saddened to postpone our grand opening celebration, delay our annual MSW Induction, and miss seeing our graduates cross the commencement stage. We have heard stories from our alumni on how client engagement and patient treatment have taken on vastly new meanings during this time.

Additionally, this year we also saw increased recognition of the injustices in our country particularly for black and brown people in our country. We know this time has brought up pain in various communities, but more importantly has brought an awareness to an issue that has long been prevalent in our society. Yet, in true social work fashion, we adapt, we innovate, we remain positive, and we continue to be a reliable source for positive change and hope. You will be able to read about various initiatives already started with in our College and School, but we also recognize that this will be a continued commitment and focus for years to come.

We are pleased to present the 2019-2020 annual school newsletter, filled with beautiful reminders of the tremendous good that can grow out of these truly unprecedented times. Thank you for your far-reaching ambassadorship and much-needed support of our school’s mission to inspire and prepare the next generation of social workers.

Sincerely,

Heather Thompson, Ph.D., LCSW
Interim Director & Associate Professor
If you see something that is not right, not fair, not just, you have a moral obligation to do something about it.

RESPONDING TO INJUSTICES
Dear CCJ and SW Community,

It is with profound sadness and outrage that we share this message today. While still mourning the killings of Ahmaud Arbery, Breonna Taylor, Sean Reed and the many other victims of senseless hate – we have now witnessed George Floyd die in Minneapolis as the result of a knee-chokehold. We know that this brings a range of feelings including anger, confusion, frustration and fear. Compounding the pain, these tragedies have occurred amid a global pandemic that has further illuminated racial disparities in our country and the work that must be done. Black and Latino Americans are disproportionately affected by the virus due to socioeconomic and health inequalities in our country. Asian Americans are being unfairly blamed for the origins of COVID-19.

Some of you may be experiencing secondary or vicarious trauma as a result of these events, which may be especially challenging since we are each so closely tied to our core values of justice and human dignity. We want to assure you that there is no place and no tolerance for “isms” of any kind in our College. We must initiate and advocate for the difficult, but meaningful, conversations that are urgently needed.

We have a responsibility to ask ourselves: How are the “isms” in our country affecting our humanity? What can we do to address these injustices? How do we stop the fraying of the rule of law, uphold the ideals of equal protection and protect democratic principles? We must all give careful thought and consideration to these important and challenging questions. We must then initiate – and maintain – conversations surrounding racial bias and our shared mission to promote – and protect – human rights through transformational change. We must also recognize that to achieve effective, sustainable progress, it is imperative that we be thoughtful, strategic and purposeful in our response.

We encourage each of you – faculty, instructors, students, alumni and community members – to engage in conversations about the meaning of these events and the role social workers and criminal justice professionals play when such incidents take place. It is important to see the connections to the ongoing, underlying marginalization of people. The reality is that these recent events reflect a larger discussion that needs to take place in order for persistent, systemic change to occur.

This is our work and commitment as professionals who adhere to justice and to the respect and dignity of every human being. We can help our friends and neighbors address and navigate unacknowledged biases. Through our actions and our service, we can guide our communities toward change. We can be a source of hope. That’s what we do. It’s who we are. And it’s more important now than ever to curb the hate and hasten the healing.

In solidarity,

Dr. Naelys Luna, Dr. Heather Thompson and Dr. Wendy Guastaferro

The following message was emailed to all of our college alumni, faculty, staff and community partners several days after Mr. George Floyd’s death.
NOW IT'S TIME TO BE THE CHANGE.

We have begun taking the steps necessary to ensure our values of equality and inclusivity are reflected holistically throughout our college - in our words, our actions and our representation. Interim Dean Luna has initiated conversations with our faculty and staff of color, which have illuminated important takeaways that we have already started implementing.

And we're not stopping there. Our work to be the change has only begun.
In early Spring 2020, our classes fully transitioned online and our communities began to reel from the dual pandemics of coronavirus and systemic racism. Our program coordinators recognized the need for students to have a safe space in which to share and process their experiences and the impact of these challenges on their clients, internships, families and communities.

The coordinators established unstructured, 90-minute WebEx conversations, which provide a platform to acknowledge all that is being experienced as social workers, as people of color and as human beings in the midst of so much uncertainty. The school will continue hosting bi-weekly calls throughout the academic year to remain in touch with our students, their thoughts and their most pressing needs.

"Every voice raised against racism chips away at its power. We can't afford to stay silent."

- Reni Eddo-Lodge

In response to recent events which amplified attention on societal issues of racism and police brutality, the Office of Professional Development hosted a series of workshops for FAU Social Work and Criminal Justice students, faculty and staff, as well as community partners. On June 23, we hosted a safe-space dialogue featuring special guest Dr. Suzanne Spencer, Ed.D., CEO of Living Skills in the Schools. Our time together allowed for individual and group reflection on diversity issues and the impact of secondary trauma on our personal and professional thoughts, assumptions, attitudes and motivations.

We then held two, 3-hour workshops entitled "Moving from Diversity to Justice" on June 26 and July 10. Crystal Morris, MS, founder and CEO of One Caring Adult and Director of Indian River Services for Tykes & Teens, Inc. and Jeffrey Shearer, ACSW, MCAP, LCSW, adjunct faculty in the Sandler School of Social Work, former CEO of Tykes and Teens, Inc. and private practice psychotherapist, facilitated the workshop to create a safe space for participants to learn about their own personal biases, sit in the uncomfortable feelings that arise and then go forward with changing the way they offer services.

The workshop explored how our world views were constructed and how our social location impacts the thoughts and attitudes we have regarding racial justice. It served as a beginning of the journey towards systemic change that comes from adopting a new mindset, rather than harboring guilt or shame.
The Society for Social Work and Research (SSWR), founded in 1993, is a non-profit, professional membership organization. SSWR supports social workers, social welfare professionals, social work students, social work faculty and researchers in related fields. The organization's annual conference - "Reducing Racial and Economic Inequality" was held in Washington, DC in January 2020. (L-R) Drs. Morgan Cooley, Marianna Colvin, Dani Groton and Christine Spadola represented the Sandler School of Social Work as conference attendees.

SocialWorkDegree.org has ranked the Sandler School of Social Work BSW program third in the state based on our BSW alumni's monthly earnings just 12 months after graduation. The ranking includes only CSWE-accredited programs and is calculated using monthly salaries deducting student debt payments, as reported by the U.S. Department of Education, to derive median net incomes of our early-career BSW graduates.

"In addition to our high job placement rate, world-class faculty and newly renovated facilities, we are thrilled to have this ranking as yet another reason why future social work students should put the Sandler School of Social Work at the top of their list for a high-value educational experience," said Heather Thompson, Ph.D., interim director of the Sandler School.

INNOVATING AMID THE CORONAVIRUS
For his last Family Therapy class of the Spring 2020 semester, Dr. David Landsman-Wohlsifer asked his final-year master’s students to prepare a performance piece about the impact families have had on them, either personally or professionally, that they would then perform during the virtual class finale. One student wrote a poem. Another student performed a monologue. Another student shared a self-made song mix that included “Pomp and Circumstance” playing in the background.

Dr. David noticed that many of his students began to cry as they listened. He stopped the class and asked if everyone was okay. They replied that, hearing the famous graduation march song had reminded them that they weren’t going to have an in-person graduation celebration this Spring due to COVID-19, and that it made them sad that they were missing out on the age-old tradition. Dr. David dismissed his students for a 10-minute break and told them that when class resumed, he was going to share a performance piece of his own.

“I wasn’t planning to perform, but it occurred to me that my students needed a ritual,” Dr. David said. “They needed the closure of commencement.” When the students returned to the virtual classroom after the break, Dr. David, was donning his full academic regalia. His husband, Jeff Landsman-Wohlsifer, LCSW, was seated beside him and wearing an FAU sweatshirt. Dr. David asked the student to please resume playing “Pomp and Circumstance”. He then read each students’ name, one by one, while Jeff applauded and cheered heartily for each of them.

“My students needed this transition and to celebrate their accomplishment, and it gave me closure, too,” Dr. David said. “The FAU student is a special student. We have first-gen students; we have people in recovery; we have people from all corners of the world who never thought they would get a graduate degree, and I didn’t want it to go unnoticed.”
What changes has the Sandler School undergone since COVID-19 came on the scene?
As soon as we learned that all university classes would shift online over Spring Break, we proactively shifted our 300 students in field placements to remote internships. This transition was no small feat and required precise coordination between our hundreds of community partners and our Office of Field Education, led by Georgia Brown, and we extended remote internships through the Summer, to prevent graduation delays. It was truly an amazing effort! Meanwhile, our faculty quickly got up to speed on all things Zoom, WebEx and Microsoft Teams, as well as learned how to transition their existing courses fully online in Canvas, thanks to Ricky Langlois, our colleague in Criminal Justice and online master teacher. They had less than a week to prepare, and I couldn’t be prouder of the dedication and patience with which everyone rose to the task, including our phenomenal staff who were a tremendous help during the hustle.

We recently learned that our BSW, MSW and DSW classes will continue via remote instruction through the Fall semester. This required our faculty, who typically enjoy much-deserved downtime during the Summer, to spend significant periods of their off-time adjusting their classes and learning best practices for online instruction so we can ensure our students continue receiving the highest quality education possible.

How did everyone respond to so many changes?
We learned rather suddenly in early March that we would shift to a remote format for an indefinite period of time. Our faculty immediately jumped in and developed creative ways for our students to continue learning, and provided the necessary support and flexibility for our students during these unprecedented circumstances. Our students were dealing with a myriad of unanticipated challenges from course format transitions and virtual internships, to possible employment/financial stressors and health and safety concerns. They have been remarkable!

Our Office of Professional Development also recognized the need for our students and the community to be armed with new tools for this unprecedented time. They offered four, free webinars to the community focused on how to maintain ethical practice in a virtual setting, how to respond to clients impacted by both trauma and addiction/recovery amid a pandemic, and the need for practitioners to practice self-care during these challenging times.
With so much unsettling news these days, what’s the good news we can be grateful for?

Many families have reported feeling more connected due to spending such concentrated amounts of time in their homes together. Those who live alone or away from family and friends have discovered new ways to connect virtually. This communal shift in our nation has allowed us to appreciate our social connections and think creatively about how to maintain them. The pandemic has also helped to, once again, shine a light on health disparities and systemic racism that are still so prevalent in our society. Not only are we able to see the injustices in our healthcare system to people of color, but we are also engaging in conversations and taking action to combat the various forms of injustice against indigenous people and people of color, as well as other marginalized groups.

What do you know now that you wish you had known in early January?

I wish we would have all known how strong we really are, individually and collectively.

What makes social workers uniquely qualified to help others during this time?

Our medical professionals are so critical during this pandemic, as they are treating the physical symptoms of the COVID-19 virus. Yet, what you often may not see, is there are social workers right along side them! Social workers focus on the contextual nature of stressors, and this pandemic certainly has impacted individuals and families in so many ways. We are able to engage with clients, assess their medical, relational, social and financial needs, and intervene and provide critical resources to their clients. We understand that we must not solely look at the medical symptoms; rather, we must examine the ways in which policies, access to resources and other factors perpetuate hardship. Our history of direct involvement with grassroots efforts and cross-disciplinary partnerships make social workers ideal change agents and first responders to these crises.

IN MEMORIAM

Harvey Sandler
1942-2020

Our world got a bit dimmer when we learned that Harvey Sandler, family patriarch, devoted philanthropist and our school's namesake, passed away unexpectedly in early January of this year. We are eternally grateful for Harvey’s legacy and his family's belief that the world can be a better place by educating and training social workers devoted and committed to the service of those who are most vulnerable.

In 2017, Harvey and Phyllis Sandler generously donated $7 million to the School of Social Work, thus naming and endowing The Phyllis & Harvey Sandler School of Social Work at Florida Atlantic University. Harvey and his family have continually supported the School with their transformative gift, compassion, kindness and generosity. In addition to naming and endowing our School, the Sandler family has been integral to the funding of students’ scholarships through the annual Phyllis Sandler Heart of Social Work event, the School's largest fundraiser. Additionally, students who are actively involved in community service efforts receive direct support from the Sandler Family Scholarship.

Each and every one of our faculty, students, alumni and community partners helps to further the Sandler family legacy of giving and transformation, and we treasure the honor.

"Give and give and give until it feels good." - Harvey Sandler

Dr. Precious Skinner-Osei has been appointed to serve as our Interim BSW Coordinator for the 2020-2021 Academic Year. Dr. O, as she is affectionately known by many students, has been an instructor in the BSW program for the past three and a half years. She has served as a University mentor and was selected as the NASW-Broward Chapter Social Work Educator of the Year.

Dr. O recently published an article in which three BSW students joined her as co-authors - all three of whom continued on in our MSW program! Dr. O has been an avid participant in various recruiting events to attract students to both FAU and specifically our Social work programs. She will make a wonderful leader in our BSW program.

Dr. Ellen Ryan led our BSW program for more than a decade and played a vital role in growing it into the largest in Florida. After returning to faculty, she taught hundreds of BSW students, supported our field education office, and served on the FAU crisis committee. We are so grateful to Dr. Ryan for shaping our BSW program and so many of our students throughout her career at FAU. She has truly been an asset, and we wish her all the very best in her retirement.

Since joining us in 2004, Dr. Gail Horton has published extensive research on substance abuse and mental health, including her latest book on neurobiology and attachment. She has been a gifted educator across our degree programs, served on committees of all levels, and after returning from sabbatical, served as our Interim BSW Coordinator. We are so grateful for the many ways Dr. Horton has impacted our school, and we will truly miss her.

Thank you, Dr. Ryan & Dr. Horton!
NEW DEAN'S FELLOW FOR RESEARCH & ACADEMIC EFFECTIVENESS

Dr. Marianna Colvin has been appointed as the College of Social Work & Criminal Justice Dean's Fellow for Research and Academic Effectiveness. Dr. Colvin, assistant professor, is a mixed-methods researcher, meaning she combines network analysis and qualitative methods to examine interorganizational human service delivery systems, particularly as they relate to vulnerable children and families.

Dr. Colvin will spearhead the college’s research initiatives, guiding faculty in their grant applications and serving as the liaison to the FAU Division of Research. We know she will bring the same level of passion to her work in the Dean's Office as she does to her teaching.

WELCOME TO OUR NEWEST FACULTY MEMBERS

Atensia Earp Bowen, Instructor

Atensia has a vast amount of macro experience working with youth, pregnant mothers and adults within the HIV / AIDS population, LGBTQ+, medical social work and homeless populations in the areas of program management and development, supervision, monitoring, quality assurance, case management and training. Her experience spans from South Carolina to Florida, where she moved in 2012. Read her full bio here.

Ellen Rondina, Visiting Instructor

With 20+ years of social work experience, Ellen's work exists at the crossroads of social justice, art and wellness. She is committed to providing the space, intention, insight and support that allows for people and communities to have conversations that empower each other's wellness and personal growth. Her professional style is a collaborative, social-constructivist, experientially-based approach. Read her full bio here.
Fall 2019 Soar-in-4 Celebration in the NEW STUDENT LOUNGE honoring high-achieving undergraduate students
The Robin Rubin Center for Happiness & Life Enhancement opened in January 2020 - realizing a dream longheld by its namesake. Robin earned both her BSW and MSW degrees from FAU and began teaching in the Sandler School in 2010 as a field faculty member and seminar instructor.

As she helped students learn about mental illness, Robin soon realized that it was critical that they also learn about mental and holistic wellness. After all, to help their clients, social workers need to learn the skills and tools to be happy. That's when Robin decided to earn a certificate in applied positive psychology. Then in 2015, she approached the School Director at the time, Dr. Michele Hawkins, and shared her idea of teaching a course in well-being. Dr. Hawkins was completely supportive of the idea, so Robin got right to work building the syllabi for her new course. Social Work and Positive Well Being is now being taught every semester and has a full student roster in every class. The Robin Rubin Center for Happiness and Life Enhancement was established to broaden the reach of Robin's initial goal – to teach the skills and tools of happiness and, more importantly, how to put them into practice. It is a space where students, faculty, staff and community members can enhance and improve their well-being while fostering a culture of authentic connection. The center seeks to enrich and nurture the physical, mental, emotional and spiritual well-being of our students, faculty, staff and community members by offering meaningful opportunities to learn and grow in these four, equally important spheres of life.

The Robin Rubin Center officially opened on November 21 when it hosted the founders of Womaze, a mobile app centered around self-empowerment for women. The event was held in the Sandler School of Social Work auditorium with a packed house of FAU faculty and staff members, as well as many members from the community. The audience engaged with the presenters in a meaningful conversation about how to thrive through the holiday season using self-care techniques.

When it is safe to resume doing so, students, faculty, staff, colleagues and community members can enjoy meditations, yoga classes, lectures, workshops and meaningful conversations free of charge. To learn more about programming, opportunities to become a one-time or recurring session leader and how you can help support the center's mission, please visit the Robin Rubin Center for Happiness & Life Enhancement website.
APPLAUDING
2020 UNIVERSITY SCHOLAR OF THE YEAR
Dr. Allan Barsky, professor, was awarded the coveted title of 2020 Scholar of the Year by the Office of the Provost in recognition of his outstanding performance. He also received the Journal of Baccalaureate Social Work's “Best Conceptual Article” award for his article, “Serious Imminent Harm to Nonidentifiable Others: Updated Exceptions to Confidentiality.”

EMERGING MENTOR AWARD
Dr. Morgan Cooley, assistant professor, received the Emerging Mentor Award through the National Council on Family Relations in recognition of her outstanding mentorship record, the meaningful ways she has personally and professionally impacted the lives of the students she’s worked with, and her potential for continued contributions to the discipline of Family Science.

EMERITUS STATUS AWARDED
Dr. Diane Alperin has been awarded Professor Emeritus status after her decades-long service to the University in various high-ranking roles, including Provost. “You have my warmest congratulations on this deserved recognition of your professional service and my deep appreciation for the contribution you made to Florida Atlantic University over many years,” Dr. John Kelly, FAU President said.

GABOR EXEMPLARY EMPLOYEE AWARD
Sara Dochterman, LCSW, assistant director, was named the 2020 Gabor Exemplary Employee Award. “Sara has gone above and beyond her job duties over the past year,” said Interim Director, Dr. Heather Thompson. “Additionally, her follow-through on managing the Operations of a school of over 30 faculty and staff alleviates a high level of stress and burden from others. She is greatly deserving of this award.”

NASW EDUCATORS OF THE YEAR FOR PALM BEACH, BROWARD AND TREASURE COAST
(L-R) Dr. Dani Groton was named the NASW Educator of the Year for the Palm Beach Chapter. Dr. Precious Skinner-Osei was named the NASW Educator of the Year for the Broward Chapter. In addition Kathryn McCormic, LCSW, MCAP, was named the NASW Educator of the Year for Treasure Coast. The awards were given in March 2020, national Social Work Month.

October 3, 2019 - As part of Dating Violence Awareness Week, more than 20 students attended a film showing hosted by members of Phi Alpha, the Social Work Honor Society. The film, "Telling Amy's Story", prompted insightful discussions about dating and domestic violence and even encouraged several audience members to share personal past experiences. A special hats off to Deanna Bryant, Phi Alpha President, and Sabrina Castellanos, former FAU Victim Advocate, for partnering to promote this meaningful event!
This past October, Dr. Allan Barsky, Professor, presented a webinar for the National Association of Social Workers (NASW), titled "Ethics in Private Practice: Pitfalls and Possibilities."

Dr. Precious Skinner-Osei, Instructor, was nominated by MSW Advanced Standing student Dante Cousart to be the "Faculty Guest Coach" at the November 9, 2019 FAU football game. Dr. O was recognized mid-field and given special sideline access during the game.

The FL Board of Governors featured our school in their #FeatureFriday social post, touting our new renovations and the new Robin Rubin Center for Happiness & Life Enhancement.

Nearly 60 BSW and MSW students – along with faculty sponsors Dr. LeaAnne DeRigne, Associate Professor, and Dr. Dani Groton, Assistant Professor – visited Tallahassee for Legislative Education and Advocacy Day 2020 (LEAD Day). The annual road trip gives students the opportunity to stand up and speak out on important issues facing our profession in today's legislative arena. Upon their arrival, they toured The Kearney Center, a 24-hour emergency homeless service center where Dr. Groton previously worked, and also attended the NASW's LEAD training at Florida State University. Students also participated in a rally on the steps of the Capitol.

• BSW student Neal Sinha wrote a letter to the editor in the Social Work Today publication about specific non-smoking policies in treatment centers.

• MSW student Connie Pavlik-Zamora was awarded the Social Work Intern of the Year Award for 2020 by Broward County School Social Work Association.

• MSW alumna Haidee Cano traveled to Boston in Fall 2019 for a prestigious Social Work fellowship with Boston Children’s Hospital. She was awarded the “Leadership Education in Adolescent Health” Fellowship.

• MSW alumnus Dre Johnson and Dr. Allan Barsky co-published “Preventing gun violence in schools: Roles and perspectives of social workers" in the School Social Work Journal.
Overall, I had a good experience and I am grateful for it. I learned how to be very self-sufficient and adaptable.

SOS Children’s Village works hard to ensure that all the children who live there are comfortable. They arranged transportation for me to stay at my high school all the way in Sunrise and worked it out so that I could continue all the sports and activities I was involved in before being placed with them.

The Village strives to provide a sense of normalcy for their children. It is easy to feel alone and neglected when being part of “the system”, but SOS Children’s Village does their best to make you feel like you are part of a family. The Village always planned activities for us to partake in, especially around the holidays. They even put together a mentoring program for the younger kids which I got to be a part.

What was it like entering foster care as a teenager?
The transition was definitely not easy. I feel like part of your high school years are for finding yourself and thinking about your future. I had so much going on at once that I felt like my head was going to explode. It was a huge adjustment and at the beginning I was doubtful about everything because up until then I was so used to living in a very toxic environment where I was deemed unworthy.

I am thankful for the workers at SOS Children’s Village, ChildNet, and Piper High School because they were understanding of my situation and worked with me to help create balance. My friends, teammates, and coaches were also very supportive. I have always been a good student, but I never thought college was going to be an option for me because of how controlling my father was. Once I was separated from him and put into the foster care system, I was introduced to so many great opportunities. For the first time in my life, I saw the possibility of a bright future.

You mentioned that ChildNet played an important role in your transition to independent living. Can you talk us through that?
Upon transitioning, ChildNet assigned me to an Independent Living Specialist, Maleah Bourda. Maleah helps to ensure that I am doing well in school, living comfortably, and always brings new opportunities to my attention. She is compassionate about her work and provides me with a safe space to talk about how I am doing and what I am feeling. She motivates me to stay focused and makes me feel like I can accomplish anything.

LaShonda Cross at SOS Children’s Village also play a huge role in my life. She has known me since I first entered the foster care system and continues to support me as I continue my journey through adulthood. She understands the hardships I face not having a family of my own and has always treated me like I am a part of hers. LaShonda knows how to bring out the best in me. She provides me with resources and keeps me connected to the Village letting me know that I’ll always have a place to call home. I consider her to be one of the most dependable people in my life.

What role did team sports play in your personal growth process?
Team sports gave me an outlet, taught me life skills, and provided me with a sense of community. I had a safe space to express myself and made amazing friends who are still a part of my life now.

Where are you currently in your academic journey, and what’s your next step?
I received my BSW in May and shortly afterwards was accepted into FAU’s Advanced Standing MSW program. I am doing the program full time and will graduate next May. I am currently finishing up my first semester and I am proud to be ending it with straight A’s. I have two more semesters to go and I will be starting an internship with the School Board of Broward County in September.
After you receive your MSW degree, what are your plans?
I plan to work in child welfare. I want the opportunity to give back to children who are or may be at risk of being removed from their homes. I have been considering either becoming a child protective investigator or working with the school board. Both of those organizations played a huge role in getting me to where I am today. If it weren't for the collaboration of the school board and DCF, I would not have been saved.

What are common misconceptions about the foster care system?
That the children do not get a proper education; that at the age of 18, children lose access to all support and resources; that they are left to fend for themselves; that they end up being trafficked, pregnant, or on drugs; and that all foster parents are only in it for the money.

While there are some instances of these situations taking place, it is unfair to use them to define the foster care system in its entirety. There are foster parents, social workers, and volunteers who are actively working to ensure that children in the foster care system are properly cared for. I am one success story and I know that there are many others out there.

What is your advice to children currently in foster care?
Your past does not define you! Use it as motivation to do better for yourself. Also, when times get tough try to remember that you are not alone. There are resources out there and social workers who are devoted to making life easier for you.

What's the best thing about your experience at FAU thus far?
My favorite professor at FAU is Seth Densen. He is a phenomenal social work professor and continues to be an inspiring mentor in my life. Professor Densen is passionate about teaching and is a great advocate for his students. His class prepared me for real life situations out in the field and I am immensely grateful for his support. The knowledge he gained from working for DCF made it easy for me to open up to him about my experience with the foster care system. He inspired me to pursue my master’s degree and helped me realize that I am fit for a career in child welfare.

The Phyllis & Harvey Sandler School of Social Work is committed to maximizing human potential, alleviating human suffering, enhancing the vitality and caring capacity of communities, and promoting the ideals of a humane and just society. Social workers combat many of America’s great challenges, such as mental health, addictions, child welfare, veterans’ concerns and human distress. The country’s 650,000 social workers are the mainstay of preventive, crisis intervention and psychotherapeutic services in public and private organizations.

Since 1970, the Sandler School of Social Work has been a part of Florida Atlantic University. The school is proud to be home to an ethnically and culturally diverse student population, offering small class sizes, building strong student and faculty relationships and providing numerous community-based research and clinical field internship opportunities to our students. Our school has a nearly 98% job-placement rate within three months of graduation.

Your support helps us develop world-class practitioners dedicated to serving those individuals, couples, families and groups who are most vulnerable in our communities.

“My passion in life is to help individuals become the best versions of themselves despite what may have happened to them in their lives. I strongly believe that anyone can come out of any lifelong issue that has held them down if they have the resources. Social work empowers students like me to equip others with the tools they need to thrive.”

— Bell Monika Cirius
MSW Student

“My intent is to prepare my students to become agents of social change, by teaching them sound, ethical decision-making skills and instilling in them an unwavering passion for learning and justice.”

— Marianna Colvin, Ph.D.
Asst. Professor and Director of the Child Welfare Institute,
2018 NASW-FL Social Work Educator of the Year
